Biden taps 'butt-kicking' fighter pilot Gen. C. Q. Brown for Joint Chiefs Chairman

President Joe Biden on Thursday officially nominated Gen. Charles "CQ" Brown, the Air Force chief of staff and a career fighter pilot with extensive command experience, as his choice to serve as the nation's next top military officer.

In a Rose Garden ceremony at the White House, Biden highlighted Brown's intellect, his experience commanding troops in Europe, the Middle East and the Indo-Pacific, and his even-keeled manner as he formally introduced the general as the nominee to become the 21st chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Brown, who is the first African American to lead a U.S. military service, appeared alongside the president, Vice President Kamala Harris, and Defense Secretary Lloyd Austin during the announcement.

"Gen. Brown is a proud butt-kicking American airman — first and always. He's gained respect across every [military] service from those who have seen him in action and have come to depend on his judgment," Biden said. "Gen. Brown has built a reputation across the force as an unflappable and highly effective leader — as someone who creates an environment of teamwork, trust and executes with excellence."

If confirmed, Brown, 60, would replace the oftenbrash Army Gen. Mark Milley, who has served as Joint Chiefs chairman since October 2019 and is slated to retire in October. He would become the second Black chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. The late Army Gen. Colin Powell was the first Black chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, though he never served as Army chief of staff.

The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff is the nation's top military officer charged with advising the president and defense secretary on military and national security issues. While the chairman is not in the direct chain of command and is not charged with commanding troops, he is instrumental in shaping Pentagon policy and planning U.S. military operations worldwide.

In Biden's remarks Thursday, he also highlighted Brown's composed nature by sharing the story of how the general's F-16 caught fire during a training mission over Florida in 1991.

"CQ had to eject at more than 300 miles an hour, landing in the Everglades," Biden said. "I'll tell you what — he was back in the cockpit the next week."

Brown is a 1984 graduate of Texas Tech University and was commissioned through the school's ROTC program. He has commanded a fighter squadron, the Air Force Weapons School, two fighter wings, and he has served as an adviser to past top Air Force uniformed and civilian leaders.

A Memorial Day weekend march to fight veteran suicide

Andy Proffet | May 28, 2023

Mark and Sandy Landvick could have been forgiven for missing the inaugural "McHenry Marches for the 22" on May 28.

"My wife and I are on our anniversary trip; we came back from Michigan to make sure we could be part of this," said Mark Landvick, who along with Sandy are coaches of the American Legion Baseball team sponsored by Post 491 in McHenry, Ill.

Post 491 sponsored "McHenry Marches for the 22" to "align our awareness efforts with The American Legion national 'Be The One' campaign," said post adjutant Rob Johnson.

The event, which references the oft-cited statistic that 22 veterans die by suicide each day, saw participants marching 22 miles, 22 kilometers or 2.2 miles around McHenry County.

Approximately 50 veterans, current servicemembers, Legion Baseball players and other veterans' supporters participated. The bulk of them started early Sunday morning from Veteran's Memorial Park in McHenry, with others joining in at different stops around the county.

About a half dozen players from Post 491's Legion Baseball team joined the Landvicks on the march.

"The boys, some of their family have served; my wife and I, our two boys are active Army right now, so we just laid it out to them about how important it is to celebrate the community and support the community and make sure they recognize all the sacrifices that have been made for us to be able to play the game of baseball," Mark Landvick said.

Round-Up

Before the march, Post 491 Commander Joe Kalisek spoke to the crowd. "We are here today to conduct an event to not only raise awareness of veteran suicide ... but through your donations, we raise money for our veterans causes, and we get to enjoy a day together helping each other accomplish a great personal challenge."

Many of those participating noted the need to raise awareness of veteran suicide.

"We do a great job of getting our soldiers ready to fight; we do a horrible job of getting them ready to be a civilian. And when we can do something to bring awareness to that, we should," said veteran and combat brain trainer Tim "Coach Papa" Stewart. "... Being out here to support those who are struggling is just a powerful opportunity."

"I think a big part of suicide awareness is making it more known to how big of an issue it is," said Melissa Downey, a chief warrant officer with the Illinois Army National Guard who also works with the state's Department of Veterans Affairs.

Downey, like many other walkers, recognize the importance of The American Legion's "Be The One" campaign.

"What that means to me is 'Be The One' that sticks up for and talks for other people that may not have the strength to say what they're going through. 'Be The One' to be there for somebody. 'Be The One' that actually helps somebody out of their darkness," Downey said.

"Be The One' means it doesn't matter if you're a servicemember ... you can do something about (suicide awareness)," said Illinois National Guard Sgt. First Class Leo Quicho, the pacesetter for the ruck march. Quicho said when he was a company first sergeant with the Virginia National Guard, he lost two soldiers to suicide within a couple of weeks.

"It has a huge impact on me. So anytime I do something like this, I march for those guys and all the veterans who lost their lives to this disease," Quicho said. Johnson said the decision to hold the event on Memorial Day weekend just made sense.

"Memorial Day weekend is a tribute to veterans to begin with. So, it aligns perfectly with Memorial Day weekend," Johnson said.

Legionnaire and Illinois state Sen. Craig Wilcox was impressed with the turnout.

"For The American Legion, they're always out and involved, but more so for McHenry and this area up here, a VFW, an American Legion, a PLAV (Polish Legion of American Veterans), we don't find many towns in America that still have all of them, and the fact that they all work together ... that's what makes these three posts so special," Wilcox said.

The marchers were led out of Veteran's Memorial Park by a horse from Operation Wild Horse, an area nonprofit that receives financial assistance from Post 491 and other area Legion posts. "We really like what they do, so we've been fundraising for them the last year or so," Johnson said.

And the marchers were escorted by police from the towns they walked through as well as the county sheriff's department.

"The police support has been amazing," Johnson said. Post 491 leadership were pleased with the event's success, including the support of local businesses who sponsored the march.

"All of this is because of great planning," said post first vice commander Phil Sweeney.

"We plan to do this again," Johnson said. "It will get bigger, and the impact is we spread the word. That's the plan."

SONS OF THE AMERICAN LEGION

In Yvonne's memory

The American Legion | June 1, 2023

SAL National Vice Commander Michael Kirschner affectionately refers to his late wife, Yvonne, as a "Navy brat."

"Growing up in a patriotic family, she always cared about the men and women that serve this great country of ours and the children of America," Kirschner said.

Yvonne (Barela) Kirschner, a member of Ovie Vernon Auxiliary Unit 2 in Pueblo, Colo., died Jan. 8.

"When she passed away, the kids and I sat down and tried to think of the best way to honor her memory," Kirschner said. "Being that she lived her life via the Auxiliary motto of 'service over self,' we felt it was appropriate to have folks give money in her honor to a great cause."

After some discussion, the Kirschner family settled on the Veterans & Children Foundation (VCF) because of its emphasis on helping veterans and their children, as well as it being the top fundraising project of American Legion National Commander Vincent J. "Jim" Troiola and SAL National Commander Christopher Carlton.

Family and friends raised $3,000 in Yvonne's honor for VCF, which Kirschner announced at the SAL National Executive Committee's Spring Meetings.

But that wasn't all.

"The vice commanders this year had challenge coins made, and we've been collecting donations from the challenge coins for the VCF," NVC Ernie Laberge announced at the meetings. "And on behalf of the national vice commanders, and in memory of Yvonne Kirschner, the national vice commanders have collected so far $11,140."

"I was totally shocked, honored and humbled when my fellow NVCs chose to make the donation from funds raised for our challenge coin in her name," Kirschner said. "It truly made me tear up and feel the pride of serving with these great men.

"This is what the American Legion Family is truly about. Taking care of one another, our communities, our veterans, and the children of this nation. ... If each one of the 2 million-plus American Legion Family members do something similar, what a huge impact we as an organization could make to our veterans, community, and youth."

Kirschner said his wife of 23 years would be "embarrassed" by the attention. But he hopes the example set by those contributing to honor her echoes throughout the Legion Family.

"(We) have always held on to the belief that we do what we do because we want to and it's the right thing, not because we want recognition," Kirschner said. "There is a great quote from Congressional Medal of Honor recipient Francis S. Currey: 'There are two kinds of people in this world — those who get things done and those who take credit for getting things done. Belong to the first group, there is much less competition.'

"(Yvonne) lived life by that motto and should be an inspiration to us all."

Sons of the American Legion announce massive American Flag installed overlooking Route 417

Andrew Harris | May 29, 2023

PHOTOS: The new 15×25 -foot flag can be viewed while traveling East on 417 from Bolivar NY

Fred Roberts is back in the news today! The Commander of the Sons of the American Legion at Post 702 in Wellsville is Fred Roberts IV.

Roberts led a group of fellow patriots into the hills outside of Bolivar NY on a mission: Raise a massive American Flag that will be visible, night and day, to those who are traveling on Route 417.

The group really wanted to have the flag installed by Memorial Day: Mission Accomplished!

The location is on private property just past the Baldwin Lumber Company. The Baldwin family graciously provided the perfect hilltop location and prepared the site for the "Sons" to install the flag.

Locals who live that "neck of the woods," helped Roberts and his crew with the installation which required some specialized help.

The Sons of the American Legion purchased the flag, equipment for hanging the flag, and solar powered lighting with the proceeds of the annual Ham and Leek Dinner.

NJ's American legion Family on FOX News Channel for National Poppy Day

Rusty Myers | May 26, 2023

New York, NY – "We are the dead. Short days ago, we lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow, loved, and were loved, and now we lie. in Flanders Fields."

"In Flanders Fields," 1915

The American Legion Family of NJ was showcased on FOX News Channel's FOX and Friends First on National Poppy Day, the Friday before Memorial Day. The segment, which aired at around 4:50 am on Friday the 26th of May, featured around 30 members of the American Legion, the Sons of the American Legion (SAL), and the American Legion Auxiliary (ALA).

The segment focused on National Poppy Day and the poppy itself, which has been a program of the American Legion Auxiliary since the early 1920's. It is the familiar red paper flower handed out by veteran's organizations with a tag simply stating, "IN MEMORIAM."

FOX hosts Todd Piro and Ashley Strohmier interviewed three members of the Department and Detachment of New Jersey, the state level organizations of the American Legion. The interview, which lasted about 4 minutes, spoke about the poppy, what it means, and why during Memorial Day we see them handed out at supermarkets and street corners. American Legion Department Executive Committeeman (DEC) Larry Bishop, SAL Detachment Commander Mark Natale, and ALA Department President Colleen Breen-Lopez all spoke about the importance of Memorial Day, and how the poppy has come to symbolize service and sacrifice.

"It's a remembrance of the fallen ... this is a special day" said DEC Bishop, when asked why we wear the poppy.

When asked what wearing the poppy means to her, President Breen-Lopez remarked succinctly that "it's an honor."

Standing behind the hosts and those being interviewed were members of the American Legion Family of Post 105 of Belleville, NJ, who all loaded up into cars at 2:45 am to be at the Midtown FOX News studios on the Avenue of the Americas in New York City. They all came dressed in uniform, which included red, white, and blue shirts with stars on them. Before the segment, in the greenroom, the group – very excited to be at FOX – chatted with some of the on-air talent and took pictures. In a Facebook post teasing the segment, Legionnaire and purple heart veteran Jim Feeney posts a picture of everyone with smiles using the greenroom coffee machine enthusiastically writing "Good Morning New York!"

Also present were members of the Military Order of the Purple Heart Chapter 366, which meets at Post 105 in Belleville.

Following the interview, host Todd Piro tossed to the other side of the studio where Commander Joe Fricker and Chaplain Bob Maggio of the American Legion Passaic County Ritual Team stood ready to recite the poem "In Flanders Fields." That poem, written in 1915 by Canadian doctor Lt. John McCrae, notes how following the detritus of war, the poppy flower grew in the battlefields and cemeteries of France.

While reading the poem, video of flags and poppies was shown, ending the segment in very somber manner fading to black before the break rolled – conveying the dignity and reverence of Memorial Day and its deep importance to the American Legion.

Rusty Myers is the Adjutant of Sons of the American Legion Squadron 105 in Belleville, NJ.

Alex Palou's pit crew performs a nose cone change on the No. 10 American Legion Honda after Palou's car was pinned to the wall by Rinus VeeKay during a pit stop in the Indianapolis 500. Palou dropped to 28.

Ericsson 2nd, Palou 4th in Indianapolis 500

Steven B. Brooks | May 29, 2023

After Chip Ganassi Racing's (CGR) Alex Palou was pinned into the wall by Rinus VeeKay during a pit stop on Lap 95 Sunday, the Indianapolis 500 polesitter's No. 10 American Legion Honda needed a new nose cone. Though it was quickly repaired, it dropped Palou – who had been running in the top 5 and had led 36 laps at that point – all the way down to 28th.

Over the final 100 or so laps of the Indianapolis, Palou battled back and showed exactly why he was so successful in the Legion car during the month of May.

Just over two weeks from winning the GMR Grand Prix on the Indianapolis Motor Speedway's road course, Palou would make his way back to a fourth-place finish in the car that has prominently shared the Legion's "Be the One" suicide-prevention initiative on the national stage since he won the pole May 21.

Meanwhile, Palou's CGR teammate Marcus Ericsson – driving the No. 8 Huski Chocolate Honda that also carried American Legion branding – moved up from the 10th starting spot to lead 30 laps, taking the lead a final time on lap 196. But a three-car incident brought up a yellow flag that became a red – the third competition-related red flag of the day, an Indy 500 record – and meant the cars would have a one-lap finish for the checkered flag.

Ericsson held the lead through Turns 1 and 2, but Josef Newgarden passed Ericsson on the back straightaway and held him off to win the race by .0974 seconds, the fourth-closest finish in Indianapolis 500 history. It was the 52nd lead change of the race, the third-most all-time.

Afterward, Ericsson said he was disappointed with the decision to go to a red flag, rather than ending the race under a caution, calling it an "unfair and dangerous end to the race. I don't think there were enough laps to do what we did. We don't get our tires up to temperature."

But he also said the effort was there. "I think we did everything right today," Ericsson said. "I'm proud of the No. 8 crew and everyone at Chip Ganassi Racing. I think I did everything right behind the wheel. I did an awesome last restart. I think I caught Josef completely off guard and got the gap and kept the lead into Turn 1. I just couldn't hold it on the back. I was flat. I just couldn't hold it."

Palou was one of the top cars on the track until the pit stop incident in which VeeKay – exiting his pit behind Palou's – began to spin right and then turned left, pushing the No. 10 American Legion Honda into the wall. It was an uphill battle from there, but Palou nearly made it to the summit.

"It's a big shame, because I think it was going to be a good race for the 10 car," Palou said outside of his garage after the race. "I know (VeeKay) didn't do it on purpose, but still, we had to go from like fourth to 30th, and our day was really tough after that. We had to go flat-out after that."

Palou hoped to win the race and amplify even further the Legion's "Be the One" campaign that he'd been doing the month of May on the NTT INDYCAR SERIES' biggest stage.

"Obviously, we wanted to do more, because I felt like we had more, and it was going to be awesome for The American Legion 'Be the One' initiative," he said. "But it is what it is. It's racing. We still made it a different way, I think, by winning the Grand Prix, winning the pole, and making a good comeback to the top four. So, overall, I feel really, really happy.

"It just makes me feel different winning a race when I see people telling me they've had family that's been helped by The American Legion because of what we do.

We'll keep on doing it. We'll keep on spreading the 'Be the One' initiative and The American Legion, and we'll keep on trying to help veterans."

It was another strong showing for Chip Ganassi. In addition to Ericsson and Palou. CGR teammates Scott Dixon (sixth) and Takuma Sato (seventh) gave the Ganassi four top-seven finishes, far and away the best showing of any team.

Palou will take a 219-199 NTT INDYCAR SERIES points lead into the June 4 Chevrolet Grand Prix of Detroit presented by Lear on a new circuit on the streets of Detroit.

Armstrong to drive American Legion livery this weekend in Detroit

The American Legion | June 1, 2023

Fresh off a month that saw Chip Ganassi Racing's (CGR) Alex Palou drive the No. 10 American Legion Honda to a GMR Grand Prix win, and the pole and a fourth-place finish in the Indianapolis 500 – and saw teammate Marcus Ericsson narrowly miss out on repeating as 500 champ – the NTT INDYCAR SERIES now shifts to Michigan, with The American Legion "Be the One" livery moving over to CGR rookie Marcus Armstrong.

Armstrong will drive the No. 11 American Legion Honda in this weekend's unveiling of the new Chevrolet Detroit Grand Prix street course, while both Palou and Ericsson also will display American Legion branding.

Despite starting in only the four road- and street-course races this season, Armstrong remains in first place in the INDYCAR SERIES rookie standings, leading second-place Agustin Canapino 77-61. He's 19th in the overall series standings and has three top-11 finishes so far. He's had a net gain of +17 positions during that span, fourth-best in the four races.

"It's going to be a hot weekend, which I actually like because I feel I deal with the heat inside the car quite well," Armstrong said via CGR media. "Obviously with the track, it's a bit of an unknown. I've seen the track just a bit walking around, and it looks to be challenging and quite bumpy in some areas. It's going to provide some challenges and a lot of options on race lines.

"In general, I like the layout of the circuit and think the racing will be quite good with a big, long straight into a tight left hand. It's going to be fun."

Coming off his impressive month, Palou enters this weekend in first place in the NTT INDYCAR SERIES points standings, leading the second-place Ericsson 219-199. He's been the most consistent performer this season, with at least a top-10 finish in every race and three top-fives.

"I'm very excited for Detroit after a really positive month for the whole team, but especially the 10 car," Palou said. "We just had really good results, and we've been really competitive. I can't wait to try and get the best result of the season on a street course. Looking forward to the new track and it will be challenging for all the drivers and teams. Nobody has any information other than what we've learned from the simulator. It's looking challenging, but we love challenges, and we're looking forward to that."

Ericsson took the lead on the 196th lap of the 500, but after a three-car accident produced a red flag on lap 199, Ericsson was passed on the back straightaway by Josef Newgarden, who held on for the win. Ericsson also has finished in the top ten in every race, including three top-fives.

"I'm very excited to get to Detroit with the new track, which will be super cool. Street courses have been good to us so far this year, winning in St. Petersburg and then the podium in Long Beach," Ericsson said. "I know we're going to have a good package for this street course. I think INDYCAR has done a great job building up the hype around Detroit. Obviously, we're coming off a strong month of May, so we have a lot of motivation to go and try to win this race. It's going to be a good weekend."

The 100-lap, 170-mile Detroit Grand Prix returns to its original home on the streets of downtown Detroit, with a new 1.7-mile, 10-turn street circuit.

In the INDY NXT SERIES, CGR developmental driver Kyffin Simpson also will carry American Legion branding in both of the INDY NXT by Firestone Detroit Grand Prix races. Simpson currently sits in 10th place in the INDY NXT point standings and is coming off his first podium finish of the season, when he took third in the INDY NXT by Firestone Grand Prix in Indianapolis.

The INDY NXT races this weekend are 76.5 miles over 45 laps on a 1.7-mile, 9-turn course.

The complete weekend broadcast schedule:

- Friday 3-4:30 p.m., NTT INDYCAR SERIES Practice 1, Peacock.
- Saturday 9:05-10:05 a.m., NTT INDYCAR SERIES Practice 2, Peacock; 11:55 a.m.-1:05 p.m., INDY NXT Race 1, Peacock; 1:20-2:50 p.m., NTT INDYCAR SERIES qualifications, Peacock.
- Sunday 10-10:30 a.m., NTT INDYCAR SERIES warmup, Peacock; 12:40-1:55 p.m., INDY NXT Race 2, Peacock; 3-6 p.m., NTT INDYCAR SERIES Detroit Grand Prix, NBC.

Detroit Grand Prix notes (via INDYCAR)

- There have been five different winners in six NTT INDYCAR SERIES races to start the 2023 season. Marcus Ericsson (Streets of St. Petersburg), Josef Newgarden (Texas Motor Speedway and Indianapolis 500), Kyle Kirkwood (Streets of Long Beach), Scott McLaughlin (Barber Motorsports Park), and Alex Palou (Indianapolis Motor Speedway Road Course-1) have all won in 2023. BROWN continued from page 1

He also served as the No. 2 general for U.S. Central Command from July 2016 to July 2018, before taking command of U.S. Pacific Air Forces, his last assignment before becoming Air Force chief of staff, according to his biography.

He has a longstanding relationship with Austin, the first Black Pentagon leader, that dates back to Austin's days in an Army uniform. The former four-star general told reporters Thursday that Brown was a good choice for Joint Chiefs chairman.

"He is an incredibly capable and professional officer," Austin said at the Pentagon ahead of the White House ceremony. "What he brings to the table — to any table — is that professionalism, and that deep experience in war fighting — and I have personal knowledge of that." Brown was easily confirmed to his job leading the Air Force in a 98-0 Senate vote, but he could face some opposition in his next vote after making diversity and equity central issues while leading the service — a topic that has rankled some conservative Republicans in Congress.

After George Floyd's killing in 2020 by a Minneapolis police officer sparked a nationwide reckoning on race, Brown released a video speaking frankly about the impact of racism on his military life.

"I'm thinking about some of the insensitive comments made by others without awareness," the general said in the five-minute video in which he details often being the only Black officer in his units. "I'm thinking about wearing the same flight suit with the same wings on my chest as my peers, and then being questioned by another military member, 'Are you a pilot?'"

Biden referenced the video in his remarks Thursday, calling Brown "a fearless leader" for providing his unvarnished experiences for the world to see.

"It took real backbone to strike a chord not only with our military members, but with Americans all across the country," the president said.

But a vote on Browns confirmation could be delayed. Sen. Tommy Tuberville, R-Ala., has blocked votes on top level military nominations in an unprecedented move over his objections to a Pentagon policy that provides travel money for reproductive health care, including abortions, to troops stationed in states that have recently banned abortion access.

Milley, who endorsed Brown's nomination on Thursday, implored "a speedy confirmation" by senators.

"He's a great officer," Milley said. "In my personal view, he has all the knowledge, skills and attributes to do this job, and he has the appropriate demeanor and he's got a great chemistry with the president, the [defense secretary] and others."

The top Democrat and Republican on the Senate Armed Services Committee applauded Brown's nomination in statements issued Thursday.

Sen. Jack Reed, D-R.I., the committee's chairman, labeled Brown a "trailblazer."

"I look forward to convening a confirmation hearing to discuss his vision for addressing key challenges and leading our military into the future," Reed said. "America needs highly qualified, effective leaders like Gen. Brown. I hope my colleagues in the Senate will review and consider this nomination based on the merits."

The committee's top Republican, Sen. Roger Wicker of Mississippi, said Brown was "exceptionally qualified" to be chairman.

"I have ... known him to be a thoughtful advocate of accelerating innovation so that our armed services can be ready to defend our country and deter potential threats, especially those from the Chinese Communist Party," Wicker said.

Brown's experience commanding all Air Force troops in the Pacific in recent years will prove critical to his role as chairman as the Pentagon has made countering Chinese military ambitions in the region its top priority. As Air Force chief of staff, Brown also has been instrumental in efforts to train and supply Ukrainian forces in their fight against Russian invaders.

He has also made modernization, especially in the nuclear enterprise, a top priority for the Air Force. The service is now working to upgrade the two aging legs of the nuclear triad that it is responsible for — the U.S. intercontinental ballistic missiles program and its long-range, nuclear-capable bomber fleet.

Most importantly, Brown has a long reputation for providing leaders unedited feedback, Biden said.

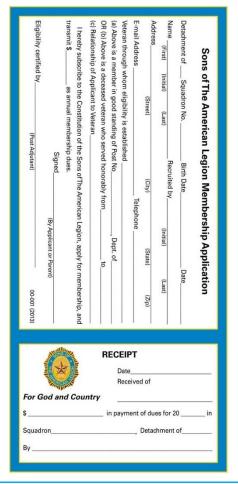

"I'll be able to rely on him as a thoughtful, deliberate leader who is unafraid to speak his mind, someone who will deliver an honest message that needs to be heard, and will always do the right thing when it's hard," he said. "That's the No. 1 quality a president needs in the chairman."

Brown, when he was sworn in as Air Force chief of staff in 2020, said he never intended to make the service a career, and he could have never foreseen rising so high in the military.

He almost didn't join the military, he said. Brown was set to quit the ROTC program at Texas Tech after just one semester, but his father, a retired Army colonel who served in Vietnam, talked him into staying in the program. Even after commissioning into the service in 1994, Brown said he only planned to serve four years.

But Brown fell in love with flying fighter jets. During his career, he's flown some 20 different airplanes and helicopters, primarily F-16 Fighting Falcons, racking up some 3,000 flight hours including about 130 hours in combat, according to his service biography.

"I can think of no one better suited and ... more qualified to lead our force through the challenges and responsibilities ahead," Biden said. "And I look forward to having you on my side, advising me as the next chairman — helping keep the American people safe."

With Memorial Day behind us, and for many students school being out, we have reached the unofficial start to summer. Activities will increase, people will go on vacation, and conventions will be held.

This will be a crucial time for membership, not only for 2023, but as we start 2024. We need to make sure we get all of our outstanding members paid so we can hit our 105% mark by the end of July. As we continue that, we must begin renewing members of 2024, as those membership cards will be in our hands in just a few short weeks.

As I have said for the past few years, July is our Membership Independence Month, and we need to renew as many members as possible by August 1. Our members will pay anyway, let's get them to honor the veteran who made them eligible by renewing early. This is also a great time to promote our online renewal. By doing so, we may see an increase in renewals in July, and we may even hit a goal or two rather quickly. It's up to all of us to try to get this done. Will you help? Who's next?

This week, certificates from CRE23 went out to attendees, presenters, and sponsors. IT is these people that made the event a success, and I again want to thank them all. Plans are already underway for CRE24, and big improvements are in the works. Stay tuned for more information in the coming months.

When you look through Round-Up, you see a page each week for sponsors. These sponsors not only promote their business, etc., but help offset the costs of providing this newsletter. Although it's free to members, and only costs time to produce, the email system price has risen, and as members are added to the list, the cost will increase.

We need sponsors to continue! If you want to see this publication continue, please consider sponsoring an ad, or seeing if your post, squadron, unit, or chapter is interested. We have a circulation of nearly 2,500 each week. Round-Up is also forwarded and posted, so our total reach is unknown. Family members look forward to receiving our newsletter each week, and I want it to continue for as long as possible.

Please help keep Round-Up in circulation. Thank you!

How to help the Coast Guard

May 31, 2023

Dear American Legion Family Members and Friends,

During my travels, I've had the pleasure to meet faceto-face with men and women currently serving in the U.S. Armed Forces. These are not customary meetand-greets with a simple exchange of pleasantries.

I have been to sit and engage with them, learn about their commitment to serving our nation, and understand the issues they and their families face. Those conversations help shape The American Legion's policy, drive our advocacy messages, and embolden our organization to support today's servicemembers and their families.

While meeting members of the Coast Guard in Oregon, I was reminded how critical it was for The American Legion to raise more than $1 million for Coasties during the record-setting 2019 government shutdown. The Coast Guard is under the Department of Homeland Security, not the Department of Defense, so it is the only military branch that is not funded during shutdowns.

That meant some junior members faced financial distress while continuing to serve their nation. Krystyna Duffy, now a boatswain's mate at the Coast Guard station in Coos Bay, Ore., told me how her crew in San Francisco kept their commitment.

"The beauty of the Coast Guard — even without pay — is that a lot of us joined to serve," she said. "Each day was a challenge, knowing that members weren't getting paid, but we made the best of it. We still answered the call and supported the call."

That is admirable for sure. But it doesn't have to be that way.

That's why The American Legion supports legislation that would ensure Coast Guard members receive their pay during a government shutdown. Rep. Hillary Scholten, D-Mich., has introduced HR 2693, the Pay Our Coast Guard Parity Act of 2023.

You can support our Coast Guard members by contacting your member of Congress today to call for passage of the Pay Our Coast Guard Parity Act. (Additionally, visit the Legion's Grassroots Action Center to stay informed on current issues and access tools to communicate directly with lawmakers.)

Thank you for what you do every day to improve the lives of our fellow veterans, servicemembers and their families.

'They are all brothers and sisters'

American Legion National Vice Commander Paul M. Kennedy, a member of Post 80 in Pittsburgh, placed a wreath at the Vietnam Wall during the annual

17 | BETHONE | Round-Up

Memorial Day observance. He then turned and reached out to some of the 58,000-plus names etched on the wall.

"There must be 200 people up here that I knew," said Kennedy, who served from 1968 to 2008, retiring from the Army as a chief warrant officer. "Whether I knew them or not, they are all brothers and sisters."

Kennedy has been a Legion member for 47 years.

"This was the highlight of my whole American Legion career, to represent the largest veterans organization, to go to the wall where I have quite a few of my friends on the wall, this was everything," he said. "I won't forget this. It was a great experience."

His military tenure corresponds to a dramatic shift in the public perception of servicemembers. "There is quite the difference. People now realize what really went on there (Vietnam) and what we originally got blamed for isn't really what happened."

Even today, the healing continues for many Vietnam veterans. That's why Kennedy handed out American Legion Be the One information, letting veterans know about the resources available as part of the initiative to reduce veteran suicide.

"Be the One is the greatest program The American Legion has come up with for all veterans and their families, I've talked with a lot of families that are being helped by Be the One," he said. "I've never hugged so many people before today."

It was a ray of hope in an otherwise dreary day in the nation's capital. At one point, a pause in the rain showers ushered in a profound moment. Upon drying, the names began to become visible once again, signifying the deep meaning of Memorial Day to the families of those 58,000 servicemembers.

Before the wreaths were laid, several speakers shared their memories.

Among them was Susan Kramer O'Neill, who served as an Army nurse during the Vietnam War. Speaking on behalf of the Vietnam Women's Memorial, O'Neill described falling in love with the wall and finding solace in touching the names.

"When you're a nurse, you don't see a glorious war, you see the results of the war," she said. "Because I was an operating room nurse, I don't know any of the names on the wall. We didn't track the names. We never heard them in most cases. And if we did, we forgot them because the next case was coming in."

Retired Air Force Col. Dennis "Bud" Traynor received the Air Force Cross for his heroic efforts to save 176 lives April 4, 1975, during the first flight of "Operation Babylift." The operation aimed to rescue orphaned babies and infants from Vietnam. After climbing to 23,000 feet, the rear cargo door of Traynor's C5 Galaxy broke off, forcing him to crash land in a rice paddy field. Among the 138 killed in the crash were 11 of his crew, whose names are inscribed on the wall.

"Few wanted to go to war," he said. "Some did it for patriotism, some did it for love of country. Some gave all, and I salute them and their families."

Details of Traynor's heroic landing of the C₅ are detailed here.

How to create Legion post, community engagement

The American Legion | June 1, 2023

The American Legion Training Tuesday session on May 30 welcomed Brian Mohlman, Department of Michigan membership director and a member of SSG Michael A. Dickinson II Post 257 in Battle Creek, Mich. Mohlman presented on how American Legion posts can get involved in their community and in return, get the community involved in their post.

"That's very, very important because once the community becomes involved in your post, what you're doing means something to that community," he said. "Then it's all about visibility. It's all about letting the community know what you're doing and letting them see the valuable contributions that you're making."

In 2017, Post 257 had 55 members. Since then, the post has grown each year thanks to its community outreach and engagement efforts. For 2023, Post 257 has about 268 members.

"As far as your own local post, look at the needs of your community," Mohlman said. "Also importantly, do anything that gets the family involved in your post because once you've got the family involved, everything else is easy."

Mohlman shared a few events that has helped the post grow during the Training Tuesday. Listen to the training here. These events include:

- Adopting a highway to clean up. "This is a great opportunity for our younger veterans and older veterans to become a part of the community and to be visible out there."
- Building ramps for disabled veterans. "We've built a partnership with Habitat for Humanity, and we have built several ramps for disabled veterans in in the community."
- Hosting a family day for a local Army Reserve unit.
 "Once you start interacting with the local military, you know they talk to each other and we've been successful in recruiting younger, currently serving members."
- Raising the flag at high school football games on Friday nights. "Our post namesake graduated from that same school back in 1998. So, we built a very, very close relationship with the school, and they appreciate that we're continually running into people who either had an influence on Staff Sergeant Dickinson's life or vice versa."
- Hosting a farmers market at the post. "In 2021, we started what we call a farmers market, and it created so much activity at the post that it drew the nickname 'the member market.' We had everything from fruits, vegetables to small plants, birdhouses."
- Having a trunk-or-treat for kids on Halloween. About 400 kids come to the post for this event. "It's just a steady line of kids coming through and just having a lot of safe fun for Halloween."
- Hosting drivers training for high school students during the pandemic. "The opportunity that we had to have these students at the post every day gave us the opportunity to educate them about programs, about scholarship opportunities, about Boys State, Girls State. This was a great opportunity. Not only for the students but for the community to let them know that, you know, we're just pitching in, we're helping out where we can."

"You have to go out into the community and let them know what you're doing or else you're not going to attract new members," Mohlman said. "If you don't go out in the community, your community doesn't see you."

Memorial Day with the American Legion Family

The American Legion | June 1, 2023

Members of Leland J Thompson Post 647 and Post 9 in Alameda, Calif. celebrated 2023 Memorial Day along with members of their community in Alameda Veteran's Memorial Park in Alameda, Calif. Photo by Jeric Wilhelmsen

In the nation's capital, Memorial Day observances received national coverage. And there for a few of them were representatives of The American Legion.

During a ceremony that included President Joe Biden, American Legion National Vice Commander Glen Wahus' first visit to Arlington National Cemetery included Wahus laying a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

And American Legion National Vice Commander Paul M. Kennedy placed a wreath at the Vietnam Wall during the annual Memorial Day observance.

But across the nation, Memorial Day was properly commemorated in the appropriate way in local communities, thanks in part to the American Legion family.

The following are examples of how American Legion Family members commemorated Memorial Day. Please feel free to share how your post, district or department observed the holiday at www.legiontown.org.

Alaska. American Legion Post 20 hosted two ceremonies Monday in partnership with the City of Kenai. The first was held at the Kenai Cemetery where a few dozen attendees gathered between the graves to honor the fallen. The second, at Leif Hansen Memorial Park, included appearances by government officials and their representatives.

At both ceremonies, Post 20 Chaplain Mike Meredith led a series of prayers and invocations, and also read a poem. In addition, American Legion Post 20 Commander Ron Homan shared stories of fallen soldiers.

"Americans, we do not forget," Homan said. "Whether it is an hour ago or a century ago, we remember."

At the second ceremony, a wreath-laying ceremony honored the fallen, and attendees were invited to affix poppies to them to honor loved ones.

Arkansas

- In Siloam Springs, American Legion Post 29 conducted its annual Memorial Day program at the Siloam Springs Community Building. The program featured speeches from Arkansas State Sen. Tyler Dees and Siloam Springs Mayor Judy Nation.
- In Carlisle ahead of Memorial Day, American Legion Post 133 placed flags on the gravesite of all known veterans buried at Carlisle Cemetery, Hamilton Cemetery and Watson Chapel Cemetery. The post invited the community to assist.

California

- In Alameda, a Memorial Day ceremony at Alameda Veterans Memorial Park was hosted by American Legion Post 647 and Post 9, in collaboration with Vietnam Veterans of America Chapter 400 and Alameda Elks Lodge 1015. Representatives from Post 647 and Post 9 took part in a wreath-laying ceremony, while Post 647 Chaplain Kurt Winkowsky delivered the invocation.
- In Cambria, American Legion Post 432 hosted the community Memorial Day program in the Veterans Memorial Hall parking lot.
- In Woodland, American Legion Post Yolo Post 77 sponsored the Memorial Day ceremony at Woodland Cemetery. Post 77 organized volunteers to set up flags along Main Street and at the cemetery. An estimated 150 large flags were set up in the cemetery and about 2,500 smaller ones on the gravesites of the fallen.

Florida. In North Port, American Legion Post 254 joined with the city, as well as the North Port Police Department and North Port Fire Rescue, to conduct a Memorial Day observance at the City Center Front Green.

Georgia. In Gainesville, Paul E. Bolding American Legion Post 7 hosted the 19th annual Memorial Day parade.

To honor the memory of those who gave their lives ... not forgetting the cost of these freedoms."

Commander commences trip to Normandy and Germany

The American Legion | June 2, 2023

American Legion National Commander Vincent J. "Jim" Troiola is commencing a trip that will take him to Normandy to honor World War II heroes, engage with NATO leadership in Brussels and visit U.S. military bases in Germany.

"I am honored to visit Normandy and pay tribute to the brave men and women who fought and died in World War II," said Troiola, who will lay a wreath at the D-Day ceremony. "I am also looking forward to meeting with our allies in NATO to discuss the security situation in Europe and thank our troops stationed in Germany for their service and sacrifice."

The statue of Theodore Roosevelt Jr. was unveiled at dedication of the Statues of Liberation in Ste. Mere-Eglise, Normandy France, on Monday, June 6.

National security will be a top priority for the commander during his visits. "This trip is important for several reasons," he said, noting that national security was among the four pillars the Legion was founded on. "It will allow me to get a better understanding of the rapidly evolving security challenges in Europe and how The American Legion can support those efforts. After all, national security has been an integral part of the organization since its founding in 1919."

Another aspect of national security is quality of life for servicemembers and their families. The commander's visits to military bases in Germany will help give him a first-hand look at how our troops and their families are being supported.

"The importance of military life cannot be overstated," Troiola said. "It is a unique and honorable journey that offers unparalleled experiences, opportunities, and lessons. However, there can be immense sacrifices, not just for the brave individuals who serve in the military, but also for their families. Frequent relocations, long deployments and emotional stress can be challenging to military families. Ensuring the wellbeing of our servicemembers and their families isn't just a moral imperative, but also a strategic necessity for maintaining a mission-ready force. We owe it to them for their selfless service, and to uphold the values we stand for as the nation's largest veterans service organization."
